Dear Herman:

I want to express to you once again my thanks for your participation in our discussion dinner on "Stability in Egypt at Peace", on Thursday 24 January. Such meetings are most useful in helping us to probe complex situations and in reminding us how much personalities affect events.

I regret I missed your opening remarks but I did enjoy your personal observation on Sadat. The vigorous discussion following the opening remarks was just what was needed.

You may assume that our National Intelligence Officer for the Middle East, and his assistants, will keep in touch. Good luck on your book. I shall look forward to it and to our next meeting.

Yours,

STANSFIELD TURNER

Dear Richard:

I want to express to you once again my thanks for your participation in our discussion dinner on "Stability in Egypt at Peace", on Thursday 24 January. It was especially useful to be reminded of the enormous complexity of the problem of understanding and assessing developments in so diverse a region existing under such peculiar economic and political conditions. Your remarks contributed to a vigorous discussion, which was just what we needed.

You may assume that our National Intelligence Officer for the Middle East, and his assistants, will keep in touch, and I shall look forward to our next meeting.

Yours,

STANSFIELD TURNER
